- 6 What can Source A tell us about the relationship between Alexios I and the crusader leaders when they arrived in Constantinople in 1096? Use the source and your own knowledge to support your answer. [7]

Source A – An extract from the Alexiad. This book was an account of the rule of Byzantine Emperor Alexios I. It was written by his daughter Anna Comnena and published around 1148. This extract describes the meeting between the crusader leader Bohemond and Alexios I.

- 7 How useful are Interpretation B and Sources C and D for a historian studying the capture of Jerusalem by the crusaders in 1099? In your answer, refer to the interpretation and the two sources as well as your own knowledge. [15]

Interpretation B – An artist’s reconstruction showing the crusader prince, Godfrey of Bouillon, entering Jerusalem in 1099. The image appeared in History of the Nations, published by a large publishing company in 1915. It was a history book aimed at the general public.

Source C – An extract from The Gesta Francorum (The Deeds of the Franks). The Gesta Francorum, written around 1100, was an account of the First Crusade. The author is unknown but it was probably a Norman or Italian knight. This extract from the Gesta describes the Frankish attack on the walls of Jerusalem in July 1099.

“On Friday at dawn we attacked the city from all sides but could achieve nothing, so we were very afraid, yet, when the hour came our knights fought bravely on the siege tower, led by Duke Godfrey and Count Eustace his brother. At that moment, one of our number Lethold of Tournai succeeded in getting onto the wall. As soon as he reached it, all the defenders fled along the walls and through the city, and our men went after them, killing them and cutting them down. There was such a massacre that our men were wading up to their ankles in blood”

Source D – From The Chronicle of History of the Franks by Raymond of Aguilers, published around 1100. Raymond was a priest and spiritual advisor to one of the Crusader commanders, Raymond of Toulouse. Raymond was present at the capture of Jerusalem.
